Tell It To Trinity

Quote du Jour: Life is either a daring adventure or it is nothing. - Helen Keller

Dear Trinity,
I'm madly in love. But recently, my lover told me that he, "Just wants to be friends." Now I'm an emotional mess. But I'm staying friends with him even though I yearn to be lovers. How do I deal with this?

Yours, Breaking up is hard to do.

Dear Breaking up is hard to do,
In an agreeable breakup the first civil act often means staying friends. However, when someone says, "I just want to be friends." more often than not they really mean, "I just want to end this episode without making you my bitter evil, enemy." I'm sure you yourself have been on that side of the prison walls before and "let's be friends" seemed the most polite way to end it. My advise to you is MOVE ON! You WILL meet another man. Now pick up your butterfly net and go back into the forest! Adventure awaits you!

Kisses, Trinity

Dear Trinity,
Every time I meet a man, he's in a relationship. Why is it that all the good ones are married? And is it OK to have an affair with a man who already has a lover, even with consent?

Yours, Queen without a king.

Dear Queen without a king,
It's 1999! Having a lover means different things to different people. So, if he says it's OK and it's not, then he's the trouble maker, not you. Secondly, I agree. It does seem like every time I fall for that perfect bearded, bald, wrestler, I discover a wedding band stashed in his jock strap. I know you're thinking about me and Bill Goldberg of the WWF (World Wrestling Federation). I know you're thinking that he's a big celebrity and I'm his ultimate soulmate. I deal with this fact every stormy, rainy day. Maybe I'm to polite. Maybe I should march right into one of his matches and trick him with some Hebraic commitment. But for now you and I should both be careful. And if you find yourself in real trouble a change of hair color and address always works for me!

Live dangerously but get the diamonds first! Trinity

Dear Trinity,
I'm having an awful problem meeting other women. Every time I meet a girl, who I really like, she ultimately has issues with drugs, alcohol, low self esteem, depression or all of the above. Have you any advise on dating? Or at least on how to pluck out the bad ones?

Sincerely, Dating Dramas

Dear Dating Dramas,
Dating is my specialty. I've been in the field for too, too long. And there are a few tips that make it easy to weed out the bad ones right from the start. So here is.

Trinity's Top Ten Dating Tips

1. A little mystery evokes intrigue and flair. But too many secrets evokes trouble in the air.
2. Dating someone exactly like us, promises a date with the most boring one on the bus.
3. Low self esteem needs therapy, not compulsive dating.
4. People who have good relationships with their parents, often have good relationships.
5. When our problems become our conversation, dinner alone becomes our occupation.
6. To much work and not enough play makes Jacqueline a dull girl!
7. Who we choose to date is directly related to how we choose to see ourselves!
8. When one substance abuser dates another, it's time for a documentary, not a relationship.
9. Communicating communication communicatively is our greatest allies.
10. Looking to date that perfect mate, who's at their ultimate potential? Then date a necropheliac!

Keep picking those flowers, Trinity

Dear Trinity,
Next door to me lives two lovers. When one's at work the other has company, and it's not for tea. I hear them having sex, loudly. I feel compelled to let them know it bothers me, at least the noise. Am I wrong to confront them? And shouldn't they eventually face their cheating issues?

Yours, Truth or Dare

Dear Truth or Dare,
When your need to challenge someone's way of life or endanger someone's happiness makes you a martyr you will be remembered only as a rat, not a saint. Either, you're not getting enough "loud noises" in your own life or you get your kicks from watching people fight. So my advise to you is go buy some sexual toys and make your own life something worth listening to. Your neighbors will figure out their relationship on their own. And lastly, if ever you decide to move, I'd love your apartment.

Mums the word! Trinity

Don't let your questions go unanswered! Send an email to Trinity at: Trinity@telltrinity.com or write to, Tell Trinity, PO Box 1362, Provincetown, MA 02657-5362. Just do it!

PAST OUT

BY DAVID BIANCO

Who was George Cukor?

January 24, 1983 (17 years ago):
Hollywood film director George Cukor dies in Los Angeles.

Hollywood director George Cukor worked in a variety of film genres over his long career, but the comedy of sexual manners became his particular forte. A gay man whose homosexuality was an open secret in Hollywood, Cukor's comfort with both male and female sexuality and identity shines through many of his now classic comedies.

Cukor was born in New York City in 1899 to middle-class, Hungarian Jewish parents. If his family had gotten its way, he would have attended Columbia University and become a lawyer like his father and uncle. But Cukor, who had been entranced by New York theater since childhood, had Broadway in mind.

At first, he wanted to be a playwright, but he soon found he hated one unavoidable aspect of writing - working alone. Naturally gregarious and witty, Cukor discovered he was better suited to stage-managing and directing, which required give-and-take with actors. He got his start in summer stock in the early 1920s and within a few years had founded his own seasonal company in Rochester, N.Y. In regional theater, Cukor gained a reputation as a director whom actors could trust because he both listened to them and modestly refused to take credit when their performances excelled. "He had great pride," one colleague recalled, "but no vanity.... He gave [actors] the star treatment."

Cukor moved on to Broadway, where his productions were only moderate successes. Still, he was in demand because of his talent for working with actresses, whose roles he seemed to understand and empathize with better than straight male directors did. "He did seem more in touch with women's emotions," Helen Hayes recalled. Many of the most revered (and often temperamental) stage actresses of that time - Ethel Barrymore, Laurette Taylor, Dorothy Gish - wanted him as their director.

The appellation "woman's director" (a slight, given the sexism in the entertainment industry) followed Cukor when he went to Hollywood in 1929, and over the years he made his mark with a number of so-called "women's films." Besides his affinity with actresses, he also preferred female screenwriters and relied on some of the best - Zoe Akins, Anita Loos, Ruth Gordon. Though not particularly political or feminist, Cukor was sensitive to women's issues. During his early film career, he often sent scripts to Stella Bloch, an old friend from New York, asking her to review them for scenes that might be demeaning to women.

Cukor fell into comedy by accident, but it proved his strong suit. He once quipped that the studio moguls "used to judge your talent by your personality. If you walked into the front office with a long face, they gave you straight drama; if you cracked jokes, they gave you comedy. I cracked jokes."

His first few films were unremarkable. But in 1932, he garnered kudos for A Bill of Divorcement, starring 24-year-old Katharine Hepburn in her first screen role. That movie launched a lifelong friendship with Hepburn, who went on to star in nine of his films, including some of his (and her) best: Holiday, The Philadelphia Story, Adam's Rib and Pat and Mike. Whenever Hepburn worked in Los Angeles, she stayed in a cottage on the grounds of Cukor's Hollywood estate. (Spencer Tracy stayed in a second cottage, to be discreetly close to her.)

Another collaboration with Hepburn was Sylvia Scarlett, a gender-bending comedy costarring Cary Grant. Sylvia Scarlett was Cukor's most personally revealing film, "brave as well as foolish," as he later phrased it. The lead character is an embezzler's daughter, who cross-dresses to escape a run-in with authorities. The plot directly challenged traditional male-female roles and boldly winked at homosexuality. These daring features (which caused the film to be condemned by the Catholic-run group the Legion of Decency) made Sylvia Scarlett RKO's biggest box office failure of 1935.

Cukor was David O. Selznick's original choice to direct Gone With the Wind. But after only a few weeks on the job, there were conflicts with Clark Gable, who hated Cukor's fey manner, especially the way he called cast members "darling." One day during filming, Gable stormed off the set, shouting, "I won't be directed by a fairy! I have to work with a real man!" The star didn't report to work the following day, and shortly thereafter Cukor was replaced by Victor Fleming, a pal of Gable's.

Although the general public was unaware of Cukor's sexual orientation, his homosexuality was well-known in the industry. For years, he hosted soirees at his Hollywood villa, which had been decorated by gay actor William Haines. At these lavish affairs, the queer elite could see and be seen. Cukor's Sunday afternoon parties competed with the all-male fetes of Cole Porter, and the two were sometimes called "the rival queens of Hollywood."

Cukor's career spanned five decades, but he won only one Academy Award, for directing My Fair Lady (1964). When he made his last film, Rich and Famous (1981), he was 81, the oldest director still working in Hollywood. He died two years later. Many of his films have become queer cult favorites: Camille (1937), with its exquisitely painful death scene; The Women (1939), with a campy "bitchiness" reminiscent of drag culture; and the musical remake of A Star is Born (1954), a comeback vehicle for gay icon Judy Garland.

program so that no one with HIV or AIDS is ever homeless in Wisconsin. Given all of the difficulties and tensions of living with this disease, a quality and reliable home environment is essential and increases prospects for long-term success with HIV treatments."

Individuals from the Milwaukee, Madison, Beloit, Racine, Kenosha, LaCrosse and Green Bay areas received the majority of HIV rent assistance funds. Rent assistance was also distributed to people residing in 46 Wisconsin counties. Nelson concludes, "We are pleased to work with the staff of the AIDS Network in Madison to make sure that people in southern Wisconsin are well served by this housing program."

Role Models for GLBT Youth

by Patti Jorgensen

Over the past couple of years, I've had the good fortune to spend time with glbt youth. Being well beyond the age of adolescence, it tickles me that there are places where gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgendered youth can gather, be open about who they are, and find support and good information. This is a wonderful thing - and I often think about how different my life would have been if, as a teen, I had heard the words "gay" and "lesbian" used in a positive sense.

Gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered kids do things that heterosexual kids do - they search to discover who they are, think and talk and wonder about sex, argue with their parents, push limits, and go through the process of developing their personalities. GLBT kids do a lot of things that heterosexual kids don't do - they feel frustrated with stereotypes, feel different a large percentage of the time, have crushes on boys or girls and keep them secret, and think about whether or not to come out to parents. Many glbt youth aren't fortunate enough to find supportive environments and have opportunities to develop themselves in a positive light.

One of the things that inevitably comes up is the issue of role models - or rather, the absence of role models. The saddest question I've been asked on several occasions is "where do we find role models who are living happy, healthy and productive lives?" For many youth the perception is that adult gay people are hanging out in bars, drinking alcohol and using drugs, and having lots of sex. Of course this is a stereotype, and perhaps an unfair one, but it also speaks to the fact that kids are looking for glbt adults who are living healthy lives and they aren't able to find them.

Heterosexual kids have lots of role model choices. They can turn on the television and in a very short time find someone who looks and acts like them and lives a kind of life that they can imagine living. Role models are visible in teachers, politicians, doctors, lawyers, clergy and parents. If a heterosexual kid can't find a role model that fits with who they are, they just need to wait a second and another eligible example appears. Sure, there are a whole lot of heterosexual adults who hang out in bars, drink alcohol and use drugs, and have lots of sex. But take them out of the potential role model pool and there are still plenty for kids to choose from. This isn't the case in the gay community.

My personal belief is that this puts some added responsibility on those of us who are gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgendered adults. Given that there aren't a lot of role models for glbt kids to begin with, it becomes very important to take steps to provide them. The future of the glbt community depends on it. Since gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered kids are looking for role models and not finding them, we need to see that something changes.

Being a role model starts with looking inward to determine what sort of role model you would be. It may mean cleaning up your act. Understand that kids are watching and right now the majority of them believe that all gay people party and have lots of sex.

An important step to being a positive role model for kids is to be visible. I'm sure that there are a lot of glbt adults in the Fox Valley area who are living happy, healthy, and productive lives but nobody knows. Being visible can happen on many different levels, but to be a role model for kids requires being willing to be out as a gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgendered person, somehow connecting with kids and being willing to share who you are even in a small capacity.

Spend time with youth. Opportunities for public speaking in schools are abundant through PFLAG in Appleton (920) 735-1025 or Green Bay (920) 433-9104. The meetings are also ways that connections can be made with youth who attend. There are GLBT Youth Partnership meetings held in Green Bay (920) 437-4325 and Appleton (920) 731-4847 and they are always looking for volunteers to help facilitate meetings.

And to those of you who are already working with youth and providing positive role models, THANK YOU for making a difference in their lives.

ARCW's Have A Heart Fund Raiser to Help Meet New HIV Challenges in Northeast Wisconsin

Green Bay, Wisconsin, January 8, 2000—As the new millennium opens before us, the AIDS Resource Center of Wisconsin is asking people around the state to give thought to what they will be able to tell the next generation what they did to make a difference in the most serious public health threat of our time.

"The challenges around AIDS continue to mount as HIV is increasingly affecting new populations of people and communities around the state," said Karen Dotson, ARCW regional director. "ARCW's Have a Heart auction and dinner is an excellent way for people to get involved and support the local AIDS services of ARCW in Northeast Wisconsin."

This year marks the 9th annual celebration for Have a Heart, which is being held on Saturday, February 5 at Liberty Hall in Kimberly. Dotson said that attendees can expect a spectacular silent auction that will feature over 100 pieces of celebrity "heart art," a lively show by the ever popular Entertainers Against AIDS and a delicious dinner. The entire evening will provide a great opportunity for socializing.

Community Service Awards for outstanding work in the fight against AIDS over the past year will be presented to Dr. James Lacy, Dr. Barbara Lauderdale, Kevin Roeder, Wayne Thiele and Gary Vander Velden of Home Depot.

"The Have a Heart is a special night in Northeast Wisconsin, where hundreds of people will join to help raise needed money, which will allow ARCW to deliver AIDS services to local men, women and children," said Dotson.

In 2000, ARCW will continue responding to the evolving needs of the AIDS epidemic by offering new programs such as expanded health care services, vocational assistance and a new intensified prevention case management program, which will help reduce the spread of HIV in the Northeast.

Dotson stressed that ARCW is very concerned about the new generation of young people at risk for HIV, and that proceeds from events like Have a Heart will help to expand ARCW's prevention programs.

This year's masters of ceremonies will be Teri Barr of WLUK Fox 11 and Kathy Larkin of WQLH-FM.

Ticket prices for Have a Heart are $40 per person, $400 for a table of 10. Individual and corporate table sponsors will be acknowledged during the dinner. Reservations can be made by calling ARCW at 920-437-7400 or 800-359-9272 x243.

LEATHER/FETISH

by Papa Joe

The Milwaukee Eagle rumors have ceased - it's closed. Effective Saturday, Jan 8, the Milwaukee Eagle closed; the bar that will reopen in the space will not be a Gay leather bar. All the rumor and speculation is over.

It won't be long and rumors about another bar will start up. Will another leather bar open? You can bet on it, but like all bars, the risk of making it is getting iftier.

The Wisconsin Leatherman Productions was thinking the contest (February 19th) would be at the MKE Eagle, but now will be looking around for a suitable venue. No matter where it is held, you can bet it will be another packed event.

From Argonauts of WI/ Green Bay The Argonauts held their January business meeting January 2. The major item of new business was election of new officers for 2000. Results of the election are as follows:

President, Russ S.; Vice President, Al K.; Treasurer, Michael S.; Recording Secretary, Steve J.; Corresponding Secretary, David W. and Sergeant-at-Arms, Dick M.

Installation of new officers will be conducted as part of the festivities of winter Quest 26, January 15, at Za's in Green Bay.

Applications to attend are still available in local bars throughout Green Bay, Milwaukee, and even at several locations in Minneapolis, Chicago, Madison, Escanaba and Appleton.

Winter Quest 26 festivities begin at 3:00 p.m. upstairs, with registration and a wine & cheese reception. Al K. will be performing DJ duties and some special surprises are planned. Dinner begins downstairs at 6:00 p.m., and will also feature some entertainment surprises. Attendees will receive a Winter Quest 26 commemorative pin, and drink coupons good at most of the area bars, as well as other discount coupons. Later in the evening an optional after-hours party is planned.

We hope everyone will join us for what promises to be the BEST Winter Quest yet, with fun and surprises for everyone!

to the new address. You should bookmark the new address when it becomes available.

21st—Friday, ATONS Club Colors Nite at the Minneapolis Eagle, 7:30 - 10:30 pm. Drink specials and door prizes. Donation $3.

22nd—Saturday, Black Guard's Pigs Fly to Trikkx, 8 - 11 pm at Trikkx in St. Paul. Benefit for 'Because We Care'. Drink specials & appetizers $1.99, 7 - 9 pm. Piggy games and door prizes. Come in costume. Prizes awarded 10 pm. FFI call (612) 522-4771.

Chris/Atons

Congratulations to the new officers and to the two clubs who choose so wisely; you are in good hands.

The Leather Swap Meet - Jan 22 to kick off ARCW food pantry drive and other info.

The beer and soda bust will begin at 8pm, $5.00. Pizza will be available later in the evening and, of course, the full service bar will be up and running as usual.

For best results, vendors are encouraged to be there and set up prior to 8pm - - but, not to worry, it will all work out.

The prize list is growing and, if I had to estimate the take between all prizes, there will be well over $1K and maybe even 2K worth given away. Some of the prizes include a weekend pass to IML and some old (60's or so) Colt Posters donated by Robert of the Main Club in Superior, WI.

I have also learned that, while they last, grab bag prizes and prize tickets will be given away if you make a substantial food donation and/or contribution. Most of the grab bag prizes are valued in excess of $6.

Below, I have imported parts of messages to give you some more ideas the happening.

Greetings from Jerry and Mike of Restraints Etc... Just to let you know, we will be setting up at the Swap Meet. We will have several pairs of restraints, Bondage Chairs and our line of "Bondage Teddy Bears". We also have a stand-up cage for sale. Slightly used, but never abused; it was previously in the back bar at the Eagle. We can be reached at mjmajor@execpc.com if anybody is interested.

We are also donating a bondage chair and a gift certificate for $25.00 as prizes.

A message from Dick and Tony of BDG, manufacturers of bondage equipment: We will be setting up at the swap meet and donating something to the prize list.

I should mention that BDG and Restraints Etc., will welcome inquiries about their equipment and will be doing demos during the evening. So stop over and get to know them.

ARCW Housing Program Provided $550,000 in Rent Assistance in 1999

The Aids Resource Center of Wisconsin provided over $550,000 in direct rent assistance in 1999 to help people throughout Wisconsin with HIV and AIDS maintain safe and affordable housing.

The growing ARCW housing program helped a record high 667 individuals who needed financial assistance to meet housing costs.

"Our mission is to help people manage this disease as best as possible," said Doug Nelson, ARCW executive director. "HIV is very costly, it depletes personal resources and makes the necessities of life such as housing unaffordable for many."

He continues, "We are determined to keep building our housing

Matt & Kelly took a road trip up to Superior and stopped in at JT's and Main Club for a few quick ones...

The 1100 Club message: Update on the swap meet and ARCW food drive - - Sunday, the 23, The 1100 Club is hosting a late brunch as well as a beer bust and is inviting all to attend and bring some food for the ARCW pantry barrel.

Papa says: - The 1100 Club Sunday brunch Jan 23th, will be a buffet starting at the normal time and ending at 2pm. Bring something for the ARCW Pantry food barrel & get a reduced price. There should be quite a number of hot men in town for that so see you there.

The Castaways MC. will be hosting the Sunday, Jan 23th, beer bust. 2 - 6 PM - - Further - beginning Sunday Feb., 6th, the Castaways MC will continue with their very popular sunday afternoon beer bust on the 1st sunday of every month. They sometimes move the venue, so keep checking this column for the latest info.

It is with sadness that I pass along the word that Morrie Bender has passed away. As many of you know, Morrie, who moved from Minneapolis to the Chicago area, was very much involved with M.A.F.I.A.

Our condolences to Kevin and Morrie's family and friends.

A heads up: I got a message from a Patrick B, regarding a Leather guest house opening (or opened) in Madison. I am still waiting for particulars. The first part of the message was a bit confusing, something about a guest house in Ft. Lauderdale and a play party on New Year's Eve. Here is what followed. "...and more locally important is the new Heim von Helen, a leather B&B only 13 blocks from the capital in Madison." I have left off names and addresses until this can be verified. If you know more about this, please let me know. Thanks.

And finally, a number of you have expressed opinions relating to the prejudice I wrote about in the last column. A couple of you wanted to know the who, what, and where stuff for it seemed you wanted to see if it happened to you. One thought I was over reacting, but, for the most part, you felt that we as a vintage persons, or perhaps it was my black brother who was with, should not have been subject to the obvious discrimination. Most of you feel that if there is a door fee to get in, it should be applied equally no matter where. I'll go on about this at a later date; in the meantime, I am running late. So, with my best wishes to you in Y2K, I am out of here. Love you, Papa.

You may have noticed the XXX Video press release for "Exhibition" in our last issue. From time to time we have devoted space to make you aware of books or videos that are of adult nature and of interest to the LGBT community. With this issue we debut a new adult review section in Quest. We intend to use this space to review and highlight books, movies, videos and music intended for an adult audience. This will include erotica as well as tasteful nude art and everything in between.

I am especially excited to pick "Lost Exit" as my first review. After seeing countless fuck films over the years, I am somewhat jaded and it takes a lot to get me interested. More often than not, I am tempted to pick up the remote and start scanning for "good parts".

"Lost Exit" will not let you down. This film is hot! There is a nice mix of young hot males and some daddy types as well, but this film is not your typical leather fetish fare. With that said, there are quite a few fantasies played out here and they are done very well. Tea room sex, cops, hitchhikers, it's all here.

I was surprised to find the soundtrack has a "Country" sound, at least in the beginning that helps set the mood. You will be very happy with the photography. Wash West does a superb job. (You can find an article on Mr. West in the October '99 Genre, page 34.) If you don't find Ethan Marc and newcomer Tuck Johnson totally exciting, you should probably switch to straight porn. I give this video my highest rating - five stars.

If you are in the mood for a solo monkey spanking movie that is truly different, you should check out "Behind The Scenes" Part 1 or 2 from Portfolio Studios. This video is different in several ways. First, you won't find it at your video rental outlet. You can only buy it from Portfolio Studios in Minneapolis. Don't fret, just log on to www.psmale.com (their website) and you can order all of their videos and more.

Most of you know the name Portfolio Men. This is the touring dance troupe seen in gay bars throughout the midwest, including many advertising in Quest. You may not know this is only part of the business. The studio also does erotic photography and is featured in many of the magazines found on the stands in your adult bookstore. This video set takes you behind the scenes on some of these photo shoots, and this is where similarities to other solo films end. This is the real thing, guys. No faked sets and corny story lines, just hot guys getting excited for the camera. If you are interested in the world of modeling or photography in the adult arena, you will find the set interesting, and if you are a fan of solo films, you need these in your collection.
